8. Paramilitary and Youth Organizations:

(a) Czech Youth Association (Svaz Ceske Mladeze - SCM)

The SCM, which was the Czech counterpart of the Soviet Komsomol, was for Czech male and female youths between the ages of 14 and 28.

youths who held membership in the SCM, was constantly increasing. Every means was used to get the young people of the CSR to enroll in the SCM. Membership in the SCM was necessary in order to get a good job. Many members of the SCM, especially children of Communist office holders or sympathizers, had formerly been members of the "Young Pioneers", a Communist-sponsored organization, which, children from eight to 14.

The SCM was not popular with the majority of Czech youths, because its members had to spend all of their free time participating in athletic training, or attending lectures, meetings, demonstrations, etc. Members of the SCM were also required to volunteer for various labor details, which usually helped with harvests or constructed roads. In Banska Bystrica, Slovakia, an entire new road, called "Silnice Miadeze" ("Road of Youth"), was built by volunteer SCM labor brigades. SCM brigades were engaged in the construction of a "Combinate" in Kuncice /4948N-1818E7, Slovakia.

the majority of them were "paper members" only, having joined merely because of pressure or in order to gain possible advantages.

(b) Association for Cooperation with the Army (Svaz Arm or Svaz pro Spolupraci s Armadov)

The Svaz Arm is the outgrowth of the "Svaz Brannosti", (Association for Army Cooperation), an organization started in 1946 by Gen. Mikula Ferencek. Svaz Brannosti was an organization of young men and women, 18-30, who were a uniform similar to that of the Boy Scouts and underwent paramilitary training in summer camps. Older men, usually ex-officers, were instructors. Svaz Brannosti, which was voluntary, did not have a large membership and was not very active militarily; its aim was mostly to promote interest in the army through exercise and emphasis on physical fitness.

25X1 SECRET/SECURITY INFORMATION -10-In the winter of 1951-1952, the Svaz Arm replaced the Svaz Brannosti. The Svaz Arm was a new organization, 25X1 , had no camps or 25X1 uniforms. It was composed of male and female volunteers, 18 years of age and up, and had older men as instructors. its members received paramilitary and extensive sports training. A drive was underway to recruit factory 25X1 workers. Factory workers trained two hours daily (or twice 25X1 the main emphasis was placed on physical fitness and sharpshooting. 25X1 (c) Factory Workers Militia (Delnicka Militia) This was an organization of factory militia who were armed with rifles and had target practice and military training in the evenings and on weekends. Passive AA Defense: · 25X1 instructions were given in March 1952 by the Ministry of National Security to all other Czech industrial ministries to camouflage the roofs of factories which manufactured paints, chemicals, explosives, and heavy machinery by painting the roofs to look like gardens. This branch, charged with guarding PW's, maintaining troop discipline, traffic direction, etc, (the equivalent of US Provost Marshal and US Military Police), was under the GBZ. This branch, as the name "Polni" implies, was activated only in war and did not exist in peacetime. 25X1 It was the only agency which had authority to arrest army personnel. The OBZ also prepared the cases for prosecution against army personnel (for political or criminal offenses). Up to 1946, OBZ men were attached to units of brigade level and higher. (b) The SNB was a regular police organization, distributed over all of Czechoslovakia, which had no connection with army or intelligence services, did not participate in army maneuvers, and had no military traffic control or military police functions.

Rumanian soldiers were stationed on the Czech-Austrian border as border guards, (sic). 11. Women in the Czech Army: Women in the Czech army were supposed to join as volunteers for a tour of five years. They had ranks ranging from pyt. to lt. col. and worked as nurses, typists, doctors; did personnel, OBZ, communication, and supply work. They received the same pay as men 25X1 in each respective rank and were uniformed. Chemical Warfare Information: The Czech army had no separate branch for chemical warfare. CW troops belonged to the "Technical Groups" (Vojenska Technicka Sluzba) which consisted of the Signal, Engineer 25X1 and Chemical Warfare troops. In 1946 Technical Group officers had plain brown lapel tabs and brown shoulder-boards, the same as for medical officers. In 1946, the Ministry of National Defense had a department dealing with CW, radio and engineering, which was called "Industrial Department" and was headed by Gen. (fnu) Kosalitski, who retired in 1947 or 1948. In 1950 Col. (fnu) Kohlik, of the Engineer Corps, was Chief of the Chemical Department of the Military Technical Institute 25X1 (Vojensky Technicky Utvar - VTU) in Prague. Kohlik was a regular army officer until 1939. From 1939 to 1946, he worked in a 25X1 chemical plant in Usti nad Labem 25040N-1402E7 and was recalled into the army in 1946. until 1946, the Technical University in Prague was the only place where CW training was given to army personnel.
